

THE SOCIETY FOR COURT STUDIES aims to stimulate and co-ordinate the study of courts from 1400 to the present. It was founded in London in September 1995, and an affiliate society, the North American Society for Court Studies, was established in 1998. The Society examines courts from a multi-disciplinary perspective, bringing together (amongst other areas) architectural history, military history, art history and cultural patronage, and the role of women in courts. Membership is open to all interested scholars and students worldwide. The Society publishes The Court Historian twice a year and holds regular seminars and conferences in London and America.
